STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK
TEACHERS COLLEGE AT BROCKPORT

in memoriam

Dr. William H. Edwards, professor and Chairman of the Social Science Department at Brockport since 1941, died of a heart attack on February 5, 1959.

Not only our college, but also those who are striving to instill the importance of good citizenship in their fellow men, sustained a great loss in his death.

To the noble cause of creating active participation in politics, he devoted his life. Dr. Edwards knew that our political system cannot survive without the intellectual participation of its citizens in the political process. His mind, his heart and his energy were devoted to the task of preparing better citizens.

There is much more to be said about Dr. Edwards, but the finest compliment that can be given to a man has already been extended: Dr. Edwards will always be remembered. We who were fortunate in knowing him will never let the memory of him be forgotten, but will strive to see that his work is continued.

foreword

The word Saga is defined as "an epic-like narrative." The hero of our Saga is Ellsworth the Eagle, and our narrative deals with the events of the past year here at Brockport. We have attempted to create a meaningful whole from these incidents.

We realize that these events are but transient in your lifetime, but we hope, nevertheless, that they will occupy a permanent and pleasant place in your memories.

glimpses and glances . . .

At a glance, the casual observer on campus might wonder what occupies the time of a college student.

Peering through the Union window, he might during the course of the day, see hundreds of persons shuttling from classrooms to the Union or dorms. Through the glass in the library, he could witness the airing and dusting of a thousand books by eager hands.

These same eager hands could be seen fondling a cup of coffee in the ever-crowded coffee shop, a favorite stop-over for busy students. A glimpse into the gymnasium might reveal a basketball game or dance class.

Within the same day, the observer might happen upon a sock hop, education class, chess game, masquerade party, study session, jazz concert, football game, band practice or any number of activities, limited only by the imagination.

Be it with books or parties, classes or clashes, the Brockport man and woman is always on the go. The finished product . . . a person who knows how to work and how to play and how to get the most out of each.

dr. tower, president

In his famous book Don Quixote, Cervantes says, "There's a time for some things and a time for all things; a time for great things and a time for small things." Obviously the members of the Class of '59 have found these various "times."

All things you have been willing to explore; some things you have discovered. Things both great and small you have found time to do. You have contributed much to your Alma Mater, not the least of which has been your time. For your loyalty, devotion and contributions the administration and faculty are deeply appreciative.

Our congratulations on your graduation include our hope and our confidence that in the years ahead the time you spend on "some things and all things; on great things and small things" will bring you the satisfaction of achievement and that reward which is the result of time well spent.

Sincerely,
Donald M. Tower

The Saga staff consists of "budding" young journalists doing their best to produce a yearbook that will aptly describe the "who, what, why, and when" of the present year at Brockport State. The editorial staff members meet in the Spring of their junior year to decide just what phases of college life during their last year should be described in the Saga. Once this is decided the editorial staff begins the recruiting of staff workers. These workers work closely with their editors, laboring over the layout, pictures, photography, copy and captions in an all-out attempt to meet the dreaded "deadline." After the last publisher's deadline has been met, the staff sits back to enjoy the easiest part of yearbook production—waiting. However, as graduation approaches tension mounts rapidly among the staff members. When the finished Saga returns from the publisher, the staff plans a party where it presents—THE SAGA.

The Student Faculty Association, to which every student and faculty member belongs, functions for the general welfare of the students and faculty of the college. This organization is governed by the Student Faculty Council whose responsibilities are to furnish proper support to extra curricular activities on campus. It is this body that distributes over $64,000 in S. F. A. dues to these activities. The Council stimulates and gives expression to the interests of both students and faculty. The Council gives everyone the opportunity to make suggestions and criticisms. All suggestions are given thoughtful consideration.

collegiate council

When prospective students visit our campus, members of the Collegiate Council are present to welcome and guide them through our school. Other duties of the Collegiate Council include assisting as proctors in admission exams, visiting high schools as representatives of Brockport and planning career days. The Council works closely with Mr. Oliver C. Spaulding, Director of Admissions.

mixed chorus

The Mixed Chorus of Brockport State represented a well balanced vocal unit. It was recognized for the cleanness of its vocal style—wonderful blend, flawless diction, concerted attacks and releases, and excellent rhythm. The Mixed Chorus consisted of a group of selected voices, and our college has some excellent voices from which to choose. An outstanding group of officers gave fine leadership to the choir. Perhaps the finest performance occurred at the Christmas Vespers program in a presentation of the Clokey Cantata entitled, "When the Christ-Child Came." The warmth and obvious sincerity of the voices were tribute both to the Mixed Chorus and to the season. The overall performance of the group might well be summed up by saying, "The musical artistry of the Brockport State Mixed Chorus was Superb."

vesper service

The music organizations and the dramatics people worked long hours to make the Christmas Vesper Service a success.

The Men's Glee Club was a growing and active singing unit this year. Concerts were performed in several cities, including Honeoye Falls, Churchville, and Albion. One of the most outstanding performances heard on campus during the year was the solo concert given by the Men's Glee Club. Their performance at the Christmas Vespers program was tastefully conceived and warmly received. The addition of new blazer coats gave the Men's Glee Club a distinctive unit appearance, and was reflected in the personal pride of the members, for esprit de corps was the highest in years.

brockport's band

The year 1958-59 was a year of flourishing growth and progress for the College Band. The greatest visual change was achieved with new Ivy League type uniforms for the musicians. A smartly dressed Color Guard was added to the membership and the Majorettes performed with dash and color. The Band made more than twenty public appearances, most notable among them being the Homecoming game, the parade for Governor Harriman, and the Fall and Spring Concerts. Membership and activity reached an all-time high as the band exemplified its new official motto—Gaudeamus Igitur.

majorettes

The majorettes, under the direction of their head twirler, Gail Skinner, have had a successful year. Their first performance was at Homecoming with "top hats and tails." They performed during halftime to "76 Trombones" and then did a dance routine to "Give My Regards to Broadway." They wore red tails and black top hats which were very striking and added a lot to the performance. The twirlers also wore bright colored costumes in the parade to honor the governor of our Empire State, A. Harriman.

The newest addition to the college band is a group of six girls smartly outfitted in new white and gold uniforms. Under the leadership of Pat Carroll, the Color Guard has been seen displaying their snappy precision routines at Homecoming, basketball games, and the basketball tournament at Oswego. They also escorted Attorney General Lefkowitz and Governor Harriman during their visit to Brockport.

winter sports club

The season of 1958-59 was an active one for the members of the Winter Sports Club. Many enjoyable hours were spent skiing at nearby Stone Church, and skating at rinks in both Brockport and Clarkson. The members had use of club equipment and the college station wagon.

religious clubs

The five religious clubs here on Brockport State's Campus provide a chance for all students to join the activities of the denomination of their choice. The presence of these clubs on campus is fitting, for in training to be a teacher a spiritual development plays an important role.

campus round table

"To help young men and women better understand the world we live in and the people who live in it." This statement helps to describe the function of the Campus Roundtable, and its sister organization, the International Relations Club. The Roundtable holds semi-monthly meetings in which the main topics of the day, whether political or social are discussed by the students. The I. R. C. selects delegates from the student body to attend regional meetings on the Political issues of the day.

english club

The English Club serves a number of commendable purposes at Brockport. Most important, are efforts to provide an opportunity for students interested in English to hold informal social gatherings or more formal meetings to discuss books, writers, or problems in teaching English. Occasionally, we join with the Drama club to entertain the drama companies which visit the Brockport campus each year. Recently, the English Club has invited outstanding college professors and teachers in elementary schools to speak to the group. In the spring of 1959 we participated in the annual meeting of the New York State English Council.

the college union

The College Union, as the center of activity at B.S.T.C., opens its doors to all: to use its many services, to enjoy the events sponsored by the Union Committees, and to gain friendships and educational values that supplement the College curriculum. Facilities such as a game room, snack bar, television, music and reading room, and activities room are available, and some of the entertaining highlights include: weekends such as YASNY, movie series, fashion shows, and dance bands. The Board of Managers, which is the governing body of the Union, coordinates the activities held in the Union. Students plan Union functions by working on the committees, which are Public Relations, Music and Arts, Social, Women's Activities and Men's Activities.

The "Vet's" party has become one of the high notes on the social calendar at Brockport and their participation in the Homecoming and Winter Carnival activities has become an entertaining feature to spectators. The Club is not sponsored by the S. F. A. and is ineligible for any prizes offered at these affairs, but their spirit of participation has excited the student body.

campus

The State University Teachers Colleges are especially privileged to have Campus Laboratory Schools in conjunction with each of the college units. These State supported Campus Schools play an important role in the preparation of the teacher candidates.

Our Campus School enrolls about 400 children in grades pre-kindergarten through eight. Within this age range of four years to fourteen, the patterns of growth, development and behavior may be studied by students in conjunction with course studies. The arrangement of the curriculum for the Campus School is in accordance with the New York State requirements for public elementary schools. It is possible for students to observe and participate in a "live" program while studying in the areas of curriculum, method, and material of instruction.

The teacher education candidate is scheduled for observation and participation activities in the Campus School through a carefully arranged program in the freshman and sophomore years. It is with this developmental program of preparation that the student matures personally and professionally for the highly important aspect of his preparation, namely, Student Teaching.

The Campus School is unique in that the children who attend serve an important role in teacher preparation and the teacher education candidates provide rich and varied educational experiences for the elementary school children.
